A beginning thought....

“Vastly underrated as a complicated transition for parents and children alike, the launching years rival any two years of parenting for the formidable events they contain, the challenges and questions they raise, and their sheer emotional intensity.”

-Kastner and Wyatt: The Launching Years, 2003

The “W” Curve

- Honeymoon
- Cultural Shock
- Initial Adjustment
- Mental Isolation
- Acceptance & Integration
The Honeymoon

• Prior to Opening to Mid-October

• Common to observe first year students experiencing:
  – General apprehension, nervousness
  – Excitement, happiness and sheer joy!

• This period typically includes students:
  – Establishing relationships
  – Testing boundaries
  – Exploring interests
  – Begin creating a new personal identity
Cultural Shock

• Mid-September through October

• New living environment + New relationships + New academic systems + New campus = can lead to students being overwhelmed or shocked

• Challenged by questions of . . .
  – What to major in?
  – Why is what I used to do for studying not working?
  – How to communicate in a new relationship?
  – What are my interests, beliefs?
Initial Adjustment

• October through December

• Finding balance with academics, managing life and campus culture

• Key time for modifying their schedule for time management, post mid-semester progress reports, opportunities for campus engagement increase, building personal confidence and exploring old/new interest

• Important to reassure, encourage, demonstrate support

• Send “snail mail” as a tangible sign of support
Suggested Questions to Determine Students’ Academic Engagement

• How are you doing in classes? How do you know your performance?
• Are you studying alone or have you formed a study group? Tell me how this is different for each class.
• Do you know all of your instructors’ names? Have you visited their offices?
• Have you obtained all your books and materials required for class?
• Tell me how you did on mid-term progress reports.
Mental Isolation

- Late November through mid March
- Typically will begin to see this period after returning from longer break periods when they have been with family or friends back home or connected to home
- Important to note, this coincides with a darker weather period in Wisconsin
- Struggle that comes in finding . . .
  - Changes in relationships back home/school
  - Academic work being more difficult than expected or not performing at level of expectation at end of term
  - Questioning their experiences
  - Trying to reconcile home life and school life
Acceptance, Integration and Connectedness

• March through May

• Final stage is more peaceful and celebratory

• Students have . . .
  – Identified new boundaries for themselves
  – Gained understanding of the campus culture
  – Established relationships
  – More confident in managing academic work and the time accordingly
  – Begun to accept their new identity

• Students may reference school as “home” = good sign of connection

Student Advice to Parents:

Please Do . . .
- Relax
- Send stuff
- Be a friend, not a parent
- Give me some space
- Be there for me and listen
- Give straight advice when asked
- Trust me and support me
- Tell me that you are proud of me
- Tell me that you love me
- Love me unconditionally

Please Do Not . . .
- Call to ask me if I am doing my homework
- Call my friends/siblings to get a report on me
- Interrogate me
- Use my bank statements to track what I do
- Make me feel guilty for leaving home
- Bribe me to stay connected
- Judge my behavior
- Hold on too tight
Our Top 5 Suggestions

5. Please put your cape in the closet for safe keeping and buy a coaching hat and whistle!

4. Only your student’s number should be on speed dial in your phone.

3. Chat about the important stuff now or early in break periods.

2. Become aware of the overstated.

1. Be prepared for the surprise!
